By homebred fury rent, long groan'd. Phillips.
- HOME'FELT. adj. [from home and felt.] Inward; private.
Yet they in pleasing slumber lull'd the sense,
And in sweet madness robb'd it of itself;
But such a sacred and homefelt delight,
Such sober certainty of waking bliss,
I never heard till now. Milton.
- Happy next him who to these shades retires,
Whom nature charms, and whom the muse inspires,
Whom humbler joys of homefelt quiet please,
Successive study, exercise, and ease. Pope.
- HOME'ELLY. adv. [from home.] Rudely; inelegantly.
HOME'ELINESS. n. f. [from home.] Plainness; rudeness;
coarseness.

HOM

but rich: every thing he wore was substantial, honest, home- spun ware. Addison.
3. Plain; coarse; rude; homely; inelegant.
They sometimes put on, when they go ashore, long sleeveless coats of homespun cotton. Sandys's Travels.
- We say, in our homespun English proverb, He killed two birds with one stone; pleased the emperor, by giving him the resemblance of his ancestors, and gave him such a resemblance as was not scandalous in that age. Dryden's En. Dedicat.
- Our homespun authors must forsake the field,
And Shakespeare to the soft Scarlatti yield. Addison.
- HOME'SPU'N. n. f. A coarse, inelegant, rude, untailor'd, rustick man.
What hempen homespuns have we swaggering here,
So near the cradle of the fairy queen? Shakespeare.
- HOME'TALL. n. f. [from ham and teebe, Saxon.] The place of HOME'TEAD. s. the house.
Both house and homestead into seas are born,
And rocks are from their old foundations torn. Dryden.
- HOME'WARD. s. adv. [from ham and weard, Saxon.] Towards HOME'WARDS. s. adv. towards the native place; towards

Leaving in pain their well-fed hungry eyes. Sidney.
- My affairs
Do even drag me homeward. Shakespeare's Winter's Tale.
- Since such love's natural station is, may still
My love defend, and journey down the hill,
Not panting after growing beauties; so I shall ebb on with them who homeward go. Donne.
- Look homeward, angel now, and melt with ruth;
And, O ye dolphins, waft the hapless youth! Milton.
- Like a long team of snowy swans on high,
Which clap their wings, and cleave the liquid sky,
Which homeward from their wat'ry pastures born,
They sing, and Asia's lakes their notes return. Dryden's En.
- What now remains,
But that once more we tempt the wat'ry plains,
And, wand'ring homewards, seek our safety hence. Dryden.
- HOME'WARD. n. f. [from home and ward, Latin.]
1. Murder; manquelling.
The apostles command to abstain from blood: contrive this according to the law of nature, and it will seem, that home- ward only is forbidden; but contrive it in reference to the law of the Jews, about which the question was, and it shall easily appear to have a clean other sense, and a truer, when we expound it of eating, and not of shedding blood. Hooker, b. iv.
2. Destruction.

HON

2. Destruction. In the following lines it is not proper.
What wonder is't that black detraction thrives!
The homicide of names is less than lives. Dryden.
3. [Homicide, Fr. homicida, Lat.] A murderer; a man-slayer.
Your beauty, that did haunt me in my sleep,
To undertake the death of all the world,
So might I live one hour in your sweet bosom.
—If I thought that, I tell thee, homicide,
These nails should rend that beauty from my cheeks. Shakespeare.
- Hector comes, the homicide, to wield
His conqu'ring arms, with corps to strew the field. Dryden.
- HOMICIDAL. adj. [from homicida.] Murderous; bloody.
The troop forth issuing from the dark recess,
With homicidal rage, the king opprest. Pope's Odyssey.
- HOMILETICAL. adj. [from homiletikos.] Social; conversible.
His life was holy, and, when he had leisure for retirements, severe: his virtues active chiefly, and homiletical; not those lazy fullen ones of the cloyster. Atterbury.
- HOMILY. n. f. [from homilies, French; homilies, Latin.] A discourse read to a congregation.
Homilies were a third kind of readings usual in former times;
a most commendable institution, as well then to supply the causal, as now the necessary defect of sermons. Hooker.
- What tedious homily of love have you wearied your parishioners withal, and never cried have patience, good people.
Shakespeare's As you like it.
- If we survey the homilies of the ancient church, we shall discern that, upon festival days, the subject of the homily was constantly the business of the day. Hammond's Fundamentals.
- HOMOGENEAL. s. adj. [from homogene, Fr. homogènes.] Having HOMOGENEOUS. s. the same nature or principles; suitable to each other.
The means of reduction, by the fire, is but by congregation of homogeneous parts. Bacon's Phys. Rem.
- Ice is a similiary body, and homogeneous concretion, whose material is properly water. Brown's Vulgar Errors.
- An homogeneous mass of one kind is easily distinguishable from any other; gold from iron, sulphur from alum, and so of the rest. Wardour's Natural History.
- The light, whose rays are all alike refrangible, I call simple, homogeneous, and similar; and that whose rays are some more refrangible than others, I call compound, heterogeneous, and dissimilar. Newton's Opt.
- HOMOGENEALNESS. n. f. [from homogeneous, or homogeneous.] HOMOGENEITY. s. Participation of the same principles or HOMOGENEOUSNESS. s. nature; similitude of kind.
The mixtures acquire a greater degree of fluidity and similarity, or homogeneity of parts. Arbutnot on Aliments.
- Upon this supposition of only different diameters, it is impossible to account for the homogeneity or similarity of the se-cerned liquors. Cheyne's Phil. Prin.
- HOMOGENY. n. f. [from homogenia.] Joint nature.
By the driving back of the principal spirits, which preserve the consistence of the body, their government is dissolved, and every part returneth to his nature or homogeny. Bacon.
- HOMOLOGOUS. adj. [from homologos, Fr. homologues.] Having the same manner or proportions.
HOMONYMOUS. adj. [from homonymos, Fr. homonymes.] Denominating different things; equivocal; ambiguous.
As words signifying the same thing are called synonymous, so equivocal words, or those which signify several things, are called homonymous, or ambiguous; and when persons use such ambiguous words, with a design to deceive, it is called equivocation. Watts's Logick.
- HOMONYMY. n. f. [from homonymie, French; homonymie.] Equiva-cation; ambiguity.
HOMOTONOUS. adj. [from homotónos.] Equable: said of such distempers as keep a constant tenour of rise, state, and declension. Quincy.
- HONE. n. f. [This word M. Casaubon derives from axon; Ju- nus from hoguen, Welsh; Skinner, who is always rational, from pen, Saxon, a stone; penan, to stone.] A whetstone for a razor.
A hone and a parer, to pare away grace. Tusser's Husband.
- TO HONE. v. n. [from hongan, Saxon.] To pine; to long for any thing.
HONEST. adj. [from honeste, French; honestus, Latin.]
1. Upright; true; sincere.
What art thou?
—A very honest hearted fellow, and as poor as the king. Sh.
- The way to relieve ourselves from those sophisms, is an honest and diligent enquiry into the real nature and causes of things. Watts's Logick.
2. Chaste.
Wives may be merry, and yet honest too. Shakespeare.
3. Just; righteous; giving to every man his due.
It is sometimes used criminally for dishonesty; base.
I'll devise some honest flanders
To stain my cousin with: one doth not know How much an ill word doth impose on liking. Shakespeare.
- HO'NESTLY. adv. [from honest.]
1. Uprightly; justly.
It doth make me tremble,

HON

- There should those spirits yet breathe, that when they cannot Live honestly, would rather perish basely. Ben. Jonson's Catil.
- For some time past all endeavours or proposals from private persons to advance the publick service, however honestly and innocently designed, have been called flying in the king's face. Swift.
2. With chastity; modestly.
HO'NESTY. n. f. [from honestus, French; honestas, Latin.] Justice; truth; virtue; purity.
Thou shalt not have thy husband's lands.
—Why, then mine honesty shall be my dower. Shakespeare.
- Goodness, as that which makes men prefer their duty and their promise before their passions or their interest, and is properly the object of trust, in our language goes rather by the name of honesty; though what we call an honest man, the Romans called a good man; and honesty in their language, as well as in French, rather signifies a compulsion of those qualities which generally acquire honour and esteem. Temple.
- HO'NIED. adj. [from hony.]
1. Covered with honey.
The bee with honeyed thigh,
That at her flow'ry work doth sing. Milton.
2. Sweet; luscious.
When he speaks,
The air, a charter'd libertine, is still;
And the mute wonder lurketh in mens ears,
To steal his sweet and honeyed sentences. Shakespeare's Henry V.
- Look now for no enchanting voice, nor fear
The bait of honey'd words; a rougher tongue Draws hitherward. Milton's Agonistes.
- HONEY. n. f. [from huni, Saxon; honig, Dutch; honey, honag, German.]
1. A thick, viscous, fluid substance, of a whitish or yellowish colour, sweet to the taste, soluble in water; and becoming viscous on fermentation, inflammable, liquable by a gentle heat, and of a fragrant smell. We have three kinds of honey:
the first and finest is virgin honey, not very firm, and of a fragrant smell: it is the first produce of the swarm, obtained by draining from the combs without pressing. The second is thicker than the first, often almost solid, procured from the combs by pressure: and the worst is the common yellow honey, extracted by heating the combs over the fire, and then pressing them. In the flowers of plants, by certain glands near the basis in the petals, is secreted a sweet juice, which the bee, by means of its proboscis or trunk, sucks up, swallows it, flies away with it to the hive, and discharges again from the stomach through the mouth into some of the cells of the comb. The honey thus taken up into the body of the bee, and deposited again into the cells of the comb, is destined for the food of the young offspring; but in hard seasons the bees are sometimes reduced to the necessity of feeding on it themselves, and die of hunger after they have eat it all up. Honey, taken out of the new combs early in the Summer, is vastly preferable to that taken from the same hive in Autumn. Honey is an excellent pectoral, is detergent, aperient, and diuretic. Phil's Mat. Med.
- So work the honey bees,
Creatures that by a ruling nature teach
The art of order to a peopled kingdom. Shakespeare's Hen. V.
- The like contention is found among the Greeks, touching his education and first fostering: some affirm, that he was fed by honey bees. Raleigh's History of the World.
- In ancient time there was a kind of honey, which, either of its own nature, or by art, would grow as hard as sugar, and was not so luscious as ours. Bacon's Natural History.
- When the patient is rich, there's no fear of physicians about him, as thick as wasps to a honey pot. L'Estrange.
- Honey* is the most elaborate production of the vegetable kind, being a most exquisite vegetable sopo, solvent of the bile, balsamick and pectoral: honey contains no inflammable spirit, before it has felt the force of fermentation; for by distillation it affords nothing that will burn in the fire. Arbutnot.
- New wine, with honey temper'd milk we bring;
Then living waters from the crystal spring. Pope's Odyssey.
2. Sweetness; lusciousness.
The king hath found
Matter against him, that for ever mars
The honey of his language. Shakespeare's Henry VIII.
- A honey tongue, a heart of gall,
Is fancy's spring, but sorrow's fall. Shakespeare.
3. A name of tenderness; sweet; sweetness. [Mel; coreu, uen.]
Honey, you shall be well desir'd in Cyprus;
I've found great love amongst them. Oh, my sweet,
I prattle out of fashion, and I dote
In mine own comfort. Shakespeare's Othello.
- Why, honey bird, I bought him on purpose for thee: didst not thou say, thou long'dst for a Christian slave? Dryden.
- TO HO'NEY. v. n. [from the noun.] To talk fondly.
Nay, but to live
In the rank sweat of an incestuous bed,
Stew'd in corruption, honeying and making love
Over the nasty fly. Shakespeare's Hamlet.

HO'NEY-BAG.
